

The stove

I want, I want a
sparse, clean life:
a small stone house,
whitewashed inside.

Around it the wind will sail and boom,
sit as constant.

I don't wish to be lulled, hooked to the skin by a long hill train.

I want to sit steadily with hose, joy and pain
and another
square,
even stone.

Steve Thompson

life
photography series

Robert G. Manning
1948, San Francisco
MFA, University of California, San Diego

